

My heartfelt thanks to all of you who participated in this project -- and to each of you who now take some moments to contemplate their work. We could not have asked for a better illustration of the healing, magical, and ubiquitous power of the mandala. Mandalas are everywhere, as these artists have shown us, in cities and on lakes, on beaches and in sand trays. They can be both found and made - on wood, canvas, stone, and soil. They just ask to be seen.

"There is no linear evolution; there is only a circumambulation of the self. Uniform development exists, at most, only at the beginning; later everything points toward the center. This insight gave me stability and gradually my inner peace returned. I knew that in finding the mandala as an expression of the self I had attained what was for me the ultimate. Perhaps someone else knows more, but not I."
